BETTING 101

Straight Bet: A bet on one game decided by a point spread, point total or money line

Parlay: Joins multiple results on different wagers into a single bet. You have to win them all to win-but the payout is better!

Futures: Making a bet that will be decided down the line. For example, betting who will win the Super Bowl in September

Prop Bet: A bet on a specific result within an event. An example may be a certain player scoring first or a certain player hitting a home run in a certain inning

Teaser: This bet allows you to adjust the point spread or totals in their favor for all outcomes in a parlay. Should any part of a teaser end in a push-that part will be excluded from the parlay and the odd/payout will be adjusted accordingly

Round Robin: A series of different parlays involving different events

TERMS TO KNOW

Action: A wager of any kind

Book: An establishment that sets lines, odds, or prices and accepts wagers on events

Cover: A team you have a bet on has won versus the point spread

Favorite: The team that is believed most likely to win

First Half Bet: A wager placed on the result of a first half of a game

Handle: The total amount wagered at a Book over a given period of time

Hedge: When a bettor has placed a wager on one side of an event and then bets on the opposite side in order to guarantee some level of profit or to mitigate loss

Hold: The percentage of the value of bets written that the house wins

In-Play: Also known as live betting, this is when you place a bet during the event-know that odds and payouts are adjusted from before game time

Juice: The Book's commission on a given wager

Line: The stated spread or odds on an event

Longshot: When a bet is considered unlikely to win-typically has high odds

Push: A bet that ends in a tie
